

Here are two rescued lions being introduced SAFELY through fencing in TEMPORARY housing, just as Rocky would be introduced to Chi Chi, a rescued coyote.

The second photo to the right is another introduction cage on a larger habitat. Rescued animals at Wild Animal Sanctuary are NEVER thrown into a habitat to defend for themselves and get injured. They are slowly REHABILITATED.

Here is an example of a coyote habitat with burrow dens that maintain 60 degrees year round!
Rocky wouldn't be kept here, but in a 15 acre habitat in southern Colorado.
